

Preparing a Curriculum Vitae (CV)

What is a CV?

A curriculum vitae is a summary of your personal, educational and work history. It is designed to interest a potential employer in interviewing you. The style of CV can vary depending on the stage in your life/career, the type of employer or job vacancy, whether you are canvassing or applying for a known vacancy and if applying for a job in different countries.

In general the most preferred style of CV in New Zealand is a combination of reverse chronological (date ordered) and functional (skills) information, which allows you to arrange the most relevant facts in easy-to-follow and targeted sections. Some employers have particular requirements, so follow their instructions carefully. Below are three easy steps to writing an effective CV.

Step one: Target your CV

Research the employer

Research the employer(s) and the industry(s) you are interested in. What do they consider important? What are their values? What type of people work for them? What might interest them?

- Use any sources of information you can find, including websites, press articles, personal contacts, industry forums etc. See page 14.
- Find out if the employer has any specific requirements or preference in regard to your CV format and order of information on it.

Understand the position description

- If you are applying for a specific position, go through the job description and highlight any qualifications, skills, experience and personal attributes the employer mentions. You need to give examples of where you have demonstrated these in your CV.
- If you're not applying for a specific position, think about what skills, experience and personal attributes the employer is likely to want, based on all the information you have been able to find out about them.

Match yourself to the job

Brainstorm how your key skills, experience, qualifications and personal attributes fit what the employer is looking for. Prioritise the list and use examples from your work, study, voluntary work, community involvement, interests or personal life (e.g. family commitments) to illustrate your suitability.

Identify 'scannable' words

- Employers may scan your CV as an image and use computer software to create a text file from it, even when you send a paper copy. Whether you've sent a paper or electronic version of your CV, employers may use artificial intelligence software to 'read' the text and extract key words and information.
- A scannable CV can contain the same information as your standard CV, but there are two important points to consider:
 - a scannable CV has to have facts for the artificial intelligence to extract. The more skills and facts you provide, the more opportunities you'll have for your skills to match available positions (getting 'hits');
 - Make sure you use the same words as the employer when describing your skills and experience as the software may look for those key words. For example, if the advertisement says 'excellent people skills', your CV should have a heading 'People skills' not 'Interpersonal Skills' or 'Getting on with other people'.
- If you're posting a paper copy of your CV, it needs to be good quality, with no unusual formatting or graphics, with dark ink on white paper to make it easy for the computer to distinguish the words.
- For in-depth information and examples of scannable keyword CV's, see Resumes in Cyberspace by Pat Criscito or E-Resumes by Susan Britton Whitcomb and Pat Kendall. We also hold copies of a DVD called 'Selection Success in one'. All of these are available on loan at Careers, Internships & Employment. Acknowledgment: CAREERXROADS 2000 The Directory to Job, Resume and Career Management Sites on the Web.

Step two: Content of your CV

Personal details

- Write your name and term-time home addresses if different. If you are using two addresses give dates you will be at each one.
- Include your landline and/or mobile telephone number(s).
- Include your email address.
- It may be helpful to indicate whether you are a New Zealand citizen, Permanent Resident or hold a valid New Zealand Work Permit.
- Information relating to age, gender, marital status, religion and health need not be listed for a New Zealand CV.

Career objective (optional)

- If you wish to include a career objective, place it near the beginning of your CV.
- Make sure it is short and specific to the particular organisation you are approaching.
- Alternatively you may title this section 'Profile' and give a brief summary of your most relevant strengths, skills and experience for the position.

Education & qualifications

- Include your degree indicating major subject(s), thesis or project title. You can write this in brief and state 'See Academic Transcript attached' and/or include your grades in the body of your CV.
- Write the name of the institution you are studying at and the year dates. Include information on when you are expecting to complete your studies and be available to commence employment.
- Include secondary school details if relevant. In some cases employers require these. It is not necessary to include copies of certificates and awards from school.
- List any other qualifications or training courses that you have completed and/or are working towards.
- If you are including qualifications gained overseas you should include a brief explanation of them, including whether they have been recognised by the New Zealand Qualifications Authority and/or New Zealand Immigration for employment purposes in New Zealand.
- Show the information in reverse chronological order i.e. most recent information first.

Achievements

- Mention positions of responsibility you have held, such as Class Representative, captain or coach of a team, or any special awards received.
- If you have many school, university and/or any other achievements, consider dividing them into categories such as: cultural, sports, leadership (positions of responsibility) and academic (awards).
- If you are a job seeker who has had family commitments while studying you may want to include these in this section.

Work Experience

- Write the job title, name of employer, location and period of employment (e.g. Nov 2016 – Feb 2017).
- List your most recent position first, and then continue in reverse chronological order.
- Provide a brief description of the responsibilities/tasks of the position. Use action verbs to describe these (see page 30).
- Note the relevant skills you developed and achievements/accomplishments you gained while working for each employer.
- Suggest and interpret how your work experience relates to the employer's activities. Note any special projects or tasks you completed and responsibilities you had.
- Consider dividing this section into 'Relevant Work Experience' or 'Other Work Experience'.

Key skills/competencies & attributes

- Identify the key skills/competencies an employer is looking for in the position description. Put these as headings. Use examples to illustrate your skills, experience and personal attributes, giving an employer a context to understand where you have gained or demonstrated these. Order your skills/competencies and attributes by relevance to the job.
- If you choose to give examples of the application of your skills and attributes in both your Work and Key Skills sections, take care to avoid simply repeating the same information.
- Use the STAR principle in writing a skill or competency. That is, think of:
 - A Situation and/or Task you have done.
 - The Action steps you took in that situation and/or task.
 - The Result/outcome.

- For example: 'Researched, prepared and delivered a presentation to over 50 students in a management course. Received positive feedback from lecturer and classmates. Achieved an A grade.'

Interests

- Include your interests – sports, cultural groups, hobbies and volunteer work.
- List any clubs or societies you belong to.
- Interests describe aspects of your personality to an employer and highlight your skill development relevant to the workplace (for example, team skills or leadership potential).
- Provide enough detail for the employer to understand the extent of your involvement and achievement in these activities.

Referees

- List two or three referees. For example, these can be a current or previous employer, a university staff member, or a sports coach.

- Your referees should know you well enough to support you in your job applications.
- List your referees' names, position or relationship to you, addresses, email addresses and telephone numbers on your CV and/or application form.
- Generally, do not attach written references to your application unless the employer has specifically asked for them. However, you can attach one written reference if you think that will 'add value' to your application. Draw the employer's attention to it in your cover letter.
- Always obtain your referees' consent before giving their name and contact details. Offer your referees a copy of your CV and discuss it with them. A copy of the job description and/or advertisement for any position you are applying to is also useful background for referees.

Step three: Presentation of your CV

Impact

- The aim of the CV is to get you an interview. You will have about 30 seconds of the employer's time to make an impact. This means your CV must gain the employer's attention immediately.
- Effective CV's are targeted to the specific employer you are sending it to. This means adjusting it for each application. Create a database/master CV that includes a range of skills/competencies, attributes and experiences from which you can then select the most relevant examples for inclusion in your CV for a particular position.

Format/layout

- The design, layout, order and style in which you present your information in your CV is for you to decide, unless the employer has specified any particular guidelines.
- Length of a CV can vary – aim to be as concise as possible. Typically no more than 2–3 pages in length is appropriate in New Zealand.
- Allow plenty of 'white space' on each page, so the CV looks professional, easy to read and not crowded.
- Use clearly defined (bold) headings and subheadings to make it easy for the employer to find the information they're looking for. Keep headings consistent in font style and size throughout.
- Make sure your CV is typed and looks professional. Use white paper to print your CV on as most employers photocopy CV's to give to interview panellists.
- If posting, don't bind your CV but staple the top left-hand corner of the pages together. This enables the employer to easily photocopy your CV if required.
- Typically, employers are asking for CVs to be sent electronically. This can include sending your CV as an attachment to an email or attaching it to an online application form via a link on a web page. Make sure your file is in the format the employer has requested, and that the file name includes your name e.g. 'FredJohnsonCV.docx' rather than simply 'CV.docx'.
- Your cover letter and CV are two halves of the one application so there should be consistency in their format and font.

Checklist – before you send cover letter and CV

- Have you demonstrated how your skills, qualifications, experience and personal attributes match the 5–6 main points the employer is looking for, with examples?
- Have you included all the relevant sections the employer has requested and/or that you think are relevant?
- Have you made clear what is unique about you? What makes you stand out from other people?
- In your cover letter, have you been specific about why you want this job, and why you are interested in working for this employer? Have you demonstrated that you have thought about the job, the organisation and the industry and identified the fit with your own aspirations?
- Have you asked someone else to read through your cover letter and CV? Do they give the impression you want to make to the employer?

Content tips

- Present information in order of relevance to the employer. For example, if previous work experience is not particularly relevant to the employer or the position, put your key skills section before your work experience.
- Make sure your cover letter and CV complement each other. Remove any unnecessary repetition.
- Make sure your unique attributes are clear.
- Use the Action Verb List (see page 30) to minimise word repetition.

Check over and proof read

- Check grammar and spelling very carefully. Don't rely on computer 'spell checks' to pick up all errors.
- Ask someone else to check it over, as you can often miss your own spelling and grammatical mistakes.
- Attend a Careers, Internships & Employment Express Appointment and get your CV checked.

Tip: Develop a database / master CV containing sections for each of your skills with examples of where you've demonstrated those skills, then copy and paste the relevant sections into each new customised CV as appropriate.

Tip: Employers who recruit through Student & Graduate Recruitment often require full course details on your CV, and/or a photocopy of your academic transcript.

Tip: You have 30 seconds to make the right impression with an employer – use it well to gain their attention and interest immediately, highlighting your suitability and 'points of difference'.

Hints for specific situations

Academia

Academic CVs need extra sections covering your academic achievements, research and teaching interests, publications, conference attendance and presentations. An academic CV may not need to include a key skills section. Ask for our handout Considering a Career in Academia.

Adult students – changing career direction

- Review your work experience and the requirements of the job you're applying for, and decide how much detail to put in. Don't include details of education or work experience from more than 10 years ago, unless it is directly relevant to the position you are applying for.
- The main rule still applies – you need to make it obvious to the employer that you have the key skills and experience for the position. If your work experience is recent and relevant to the position, you may want to prioritise that section and include relevant skills within your description of the work experience. If you're looking to change direction and your work experience is not directly relevant to the position, prioritise your relevant skills section and keep your work experience short and concise.

Engineering

- Put details of your engineering experience immediately after your education details and achievements, perhaps in a separate section to your other work experience. Any work you have done as required by your degree can be counted as relevant engineering work experience, along with any additional engineering work experience you have done.
- Engineering employers want graduates with strong written and oral communication skills, as well as engineering expertise. Your CV and cover letter are your opportunity to show the effectiveness of your written communication skills.

Tip: Posting e-résumés on the web is a popular job search technique. This allows employers to access your information and contact you without you having to search for every vacancy. LinkedIn is a popular tool for achieving this (www.linkedin.com). For a comprehensive guide to preparing an e-résumé, visit seek.co.nz or www.damngood.com/jobseekers/tips.html or www.eresumes.com

Government

- Government departments often ask for evidence that you possess specific competencies, which they specify in the job description. You must provide a detailed answer for each competency, highlighting how you possess the skills and experience they are looking for.
- When describing examples of where you have demonstrated a particular competency, use the STAR principle: outline the Situation/Task, describe the Actions you took and finish by mentioning the Result (see page 21).

Graphic design or 'creative' roles

- If being visually creative is a large part of the job you're applying for, be creative in the appearance of your CV in your use of colour, fonts, space, graphics etc.
- The information must still be clear, easy to read and logically presented. The CV must also photocopy well, so make sure any colours used don't cause information to disappear after photocopying (e.g. text on a bright background might not be legible after photocopying).
- Your CV is a showcase for your design skills – think about what impression you want to give.

International Employment

- If you're looking for work internationally, be aware that CV styles may vary in different countries. Also, overseas employers may not have experience with New Zealand qualifications and may require more detail or explanation of your studies.

- If you are applying for jobs in other countries use the Going Global website. UC has a paid subscription to this site, which you can access by using the link <https://online.goinglobal.com/> from any device linked to the UC network. This enables you to find over 100 pages of job search related information for over 35 different countries. Alternatively, limited public access is available via www.goinglobal.com.
- Overseas job search websites are listed in the "Job Hunting" section of the UC Careers & Employment website www.canterbury.ac.nz/careers

Law

- Law firms frequently want to see a full academic history, including full university and high school results. Include the results in reverse chronological order in your CV and attach a copy of your university academic transcript as well. Check if the employer has asked for certified copies of transcripts – these need to be signed by a solicitor or Justice of the Peace.
- Law employers may also want to see written school references/testimonials and test results. Make sure you provide exactly what the employer has asked for.
- Although grades are important, law firms may be looking for a history of solid, not necessarily outstanding, achievement, and a good culture fit. They often want people who are enthusiastic and energetic, well-rounded and with a balanced lifestyle, so also include details of your achievements, hobbies and interests.
- Make sure there are no mistakes and the CV flows well – lawyers have to be careful, accurate, pay attention to detail and communicate effectively. Does your CV illustrate your ability to do this?

Marketing, sales, advertising

- Jobs in these areas require you to be persuasive. Your CV and cover letter are examples of your ability to market yourself – use the skills you've learned in your degree, as well as your innate abilities, to show how effectively you can present yourself.

Tip: Come and talk to Careers, Internships & Employment if you need assistance with your CV. We are here to help you.

- Managed customer complaints in hospitality roles by listening, ascertaining the problem and finding an appropriate solution, liaising with the manager when necessary.
- Analysed the hockey team's performance and devised training routines to deal with any problem areas as part of my responsibilities as coach.

A You don't need to include age, gender, marital status or health status.
If you were born overseas and have citizenship, Permanent Resident status or a work permit, it is helpful to indicate this.

B Make sure your telephone messages and email addresses give an appropriate impression to an employer.

C Reverse chronological order (most recent first) for your Education and Qualifications and Work History sections.

D Some employers, especially law firms, require full details of your school and university results.

E Key skill sub-headings need to match the skills, attributes and experience the employer is looking for as highlighted in the position description.

F Use action verbs to describe situations or tasks you have done, followed by the outcome/results. This will provide evidence that you have used the skill in a number of different settings or for different purposes.

G It is wise to include a header or footer with your name, the date and page number, in case the pages of your CV get separated.

Layout should be clear, with consistent fonts, margins and white space to make the CV easy to read.

Teaching CVs

In addition to the general information on writing an effective CV, Careers, Internships & Employment would recommend the following information for a teaching CV. Remember, variations may occur depending on your area of teaching:

General tips

- Make sure you target your CV to the position description and person specification. If in doubt contact your prospective employer directly and ask if they have any particular requirements.
- Read your prospective employer's newsletter, website and ERO report. Ask your lecturers about their knowledge of schools you are applying to. Talk to classmates who have had teaching placements there. These are all ideal ways to inform your job application process and understand the community that your prospective employer is part of.
- Some prospective employers will accept your CV via email, others won't. Check your prospective employer's preference. This information may be listed at the bottom of the information pack, or ask them.
- Prospective employers might like to meet with you. If appropriate, make your appointment to hand in your application in person.
- Keep your CV brief – usually no more than 2–4 pages.

- Highlight in your CV your ability to work in a team, and to accept and act on advice given.
- If appropriate for the position, consider how you can use your creativity and imagination in the presentation of your CV to ensure it stands out.
- Ask for feedback on your CV from Careers, Internships and Employment staff. Alternatively an academic staff member at the College of Education maybe able to give you feedback. If you use photos of you interacting with children in your CV, remember children must not be identifiable.

Personal Details

- Indicate that you will be applying for your provisional teacher registration number when your official academic transcript has been released. For example, you could state this in your CV in this way: 'Application yet to be actioned' or 'application currently being processed'.
- Identify if you are a NZ Citizen or Permanent NZ resident.
- Make a note if you have your driver's licence and your own transport (if relevant).
- Photos are optional. If you do include some make sure they show you in a professional and positive light. Be selective – do not include too many.

Education & Qualifications

- Include any relevant professional development you have had.
- As a beginning teacher include your Academic Transcript with your job applications. Your 'unofficial' academic transcript may be sufficient in the first instance. See page 8 of this Guide for details on how you can order your 'official' and 'unofficial' transcript.

Teaching Placements

- Starting with your most recent position, include the year levels, names of associates and schools, centres or services you have taught at. Also include a brief summary of what you 'achieved' on each placement
- Highlight positions of responsibility you held, any extracurricular participation and professional development attended.
- Where appropriate, include comments from your professional practice records to support your achievements in the classroom.

POINT TO POINT EDUCATION YOUR CAREER SUPPORT NETWORK

a world of possibilities

POINT TO POINT EDUCATION (P2PE) IS A KIWI OWNED TEACHER EDUCATION RECRUITMENT AGENCY.

Curriculum Areas & Strengths

- Give examples of your knowledge, experience and strengths in different curriculum areas.
- Make sure your classroom management and organisation skills are addressed.
- List any other relevant strengths / skills and how they will benefit your teaching in the positions are you applying for. Highlight attributes such as being responsible, honest, resilient, able to embrace diversity and use your initiative.

Teaching Philosophy

- Your teaching philosophy needs to summarise what you believe about teaching and learning, based on your understanding of various theories, models, approaches and classroom experience. It needs to reflect your planned practices and be congruent with your values and beliefs.
- The length and presentation of your teaching philosophy may vary as to what different employers look for, but keep it relevant to the application and concise. You can use your creative flair, ideas, quotes etc in illustrating your teaching philosophy. Talk to associate teachers about how they have presented their teaching philosophy in their CV, as a way of generating ideas.

Additional Work Experience

- State specific transferable skills and attributes you have gained in other work experience that are relevant to the teaching jobs you are applying for.

Achievements & Interests

- Make sure you include any sporting, cultural, community, academic and leadership achievements.
- Highlight your interests and any transferable skills and personal attributes you have gained that you would bring to the teaching profession.

Referees

- Make sure you ask your referees for their permission and that they will be supportive of your application.
- Your final teaching placement associate teacher reports – as well as speaking with your most recent associate teachers – will be of particular interest to a prospective employer as they will provide evidence of your classroom practice. Be aware your referees may have to fill in a confidential referee report and submit it directly to your prospective employer.

- Make sure you include your referees' work, home and mobile numbers (with their permission). This way they can be contacted during the evening, on the weekends or school holidays if required.
- A character and/or work referee are also helpful to include. Additional written references supporting your application can be enclosed, but consider their relevance to the position you are applying for.

Professional knowledge / professional practice / professional values & relationships

- In summary, your CV needs to reflect the Education Council of Aotearoa New Zealand Graduating Teacher Standards and how you have achieved these. See: <https://educationcouncil.org.nz/content/graduating-teacher-standards>
